Speaking engagements galore!

The first half of this year has been a hectic one for me as a speaker. My supply chain fraud topic is as popular as ever! It seems that fraud has yet to go out of style, which is rather unfortunate in-and-of itself. So, where have I been? Let's see.

I presented at Operations Summit in Pittsburgh in March. This conference is the rebranding and resurrection of the former National Conference on Operations & Fulfillment which I had the opportunity to present at in 2007 on supply chain vendor compliance and in 2009 on supply chain fraud.

In April traveled just up the road a bit to the Orlando chapter of APICS and presented on supply chain fraud to the nice folks there. The APICS Orlando chapter meets at a country club and the food was absolutely delicious!

In early June I presented on supply chain fraud to the Florida Gold Coast Alumni Chapter of Alpha Kappa Psi professional business fraternity. This group's summer Continuing Professional Education series has become an annual speaking engagement for me since 2010.

Later in June I made my first visit to the great state of Colorado and enjoyed a week in Denver as a return speaker to the national conference of the Institute of Management Accountants. This was the IMA's 98th annual conference! I previously presented for them in 2015 at their national conference in Los Angeles, also on supply chain fraud. As I did when I traveled to Los Angeles, I stayed for a few extra days after the conference and enjoyed some terrific sightseeing, this time around the local Denver area.

I don't only speak on supply chain fraud! I am happy to present on my second book which is about supply chain vendor compliance and how companies can reduce their costs and improve their relationships with their supplier community. And I have a rather engaging (at least I think so) presentation on leadership if your organization would like. Or I can talk about how to become a good, non-disruptive, strategic vendor, especially when selling to retailers.

If there is a topic your organization or association is interested in and you would like me as a speaker, contact me and let me know. If you have an idea for a topic and it is within my area of expertise where I feel comfortable in presenting it, I'll create the presentation and will be happy to speak on the topic, so feel free to contact me with ideas.
